Curious Facts About Teeth.

Where teeth are extracted and immediately replaced in their sockets they not unfrequently remain firm in the jaw for years.

Thirty odd years ago, when I first began to study medicine, I thought after three days' study it was high time I should begin to practice. A girl living in my mother's family was attacked with a severe toothache, and, of course, applied to the new doctor. The doctor examined the case very critically, and decided, after the gravest thought, that it was a case of pain in a tooth, and at length came to the conclusion that said tooth must be extracted. In no other way, with all his experience, could he promise to relieve the patient. The maternal head of the household was called in consultation, and was rather disposed to favor pulling the tooth instead of extracting it. But the doctor was firm in his conviction, basing his opinion on the results of the thousands of similar cases which had fallen under his observation. The doctor had not at that time ever seen a tooth extracted, and so practiced, on the way from the office, on the end of his thumb with the hook of the turnkey, so as to learn just how to seize upon the tooth, and thus fully to prepare himself to meet with unfaltering courage and coolness this trying emergency in his professional experience.

The offending tooth was the one immediately behind the eye-tooth. In my trepidation I allowed the hook to touch the eye-tooth as well, and drew them both out, the eye-tooth being entirely sound. Immediately and without any definite notion of what I was doing, I replaced the eye-tooth in its socket. Having recovered from the hand-trembling and excitement incident to my acute sympathy with the deceased, or rather with my suffering patient, I at once saw that it was very important that she should keep her tongue away from the eye-tooth, so I suggested the chances of a gold tooth in the emptied socket, and urged the importance of keeping everything away from that part of her mouth. The eye-tooth stuck in its place and remained, serving faithfully many years.

There is a gentleman now living in New York City who has three beautiful front teeth which he purchased from the mouth of an Irishman. His own decayed teeth were removed, and instantly Patrick's were transferred. In the case of two of these teeth the success was complete, and even the third one the gentleman retains, though it is loose and seems to have no vital connection with his jaw.

Not unfrequently the teeth of young animals have been quickly transferred from their sockets to the pared comb of a cock and a nutritive circulation established.

I used to know a young lady who had a decayed front tooth. It was so exceedingly sensitive that she thought it impossible to have those sharp-pointed dental instruments thrust into the cavity, and, indeed, almost went into hysterics when an excavation was attempted. At length she was advised, as the process of destruction was going forward and she must soon lose the tooth, to be etherized and have the tooth extracted and instantly returned to its place. Of course we all know now there was a much simpler plan for destroying the nervous sensibility, but in this case the extraction was accomplished, and the tooth immediately replaced. The circulation was reestablished, and in a few weeks the tooth was so firmly fastened in its socket that it bore the necessary force of plugging, and has remained a good tooth for many years.

If it were practicable to determine the exact form of the portion enclosed in the socket by an examination of the protruding part of a tooth, I have little doubt that it might become very common to transfer teeth from one mouth to another. Precious as our teeth are, many persons could be found who for a consideration would part with the most beautiful ones.

The introduction of rubber instead of gold for plates for artificial teeth is a great improvement. A good, honest dentist—and I think there are a great many such—will furnish very good substitutes for the natural teeth if you will give him a commission to spend as much time as he finds necessary in making them.—Dr. Dio Lewis, in Golden Rule.

RELIGIOUS AND EDUCATIONAL.

—The Rev. Mr. Green, of Raleigh, N. C., recently immersed 140 persons in seventy minutes.—N. Y. Post.

—The Free Church of Scotland has been moved to promulgate a warning against the "sin of admiring the works of nature on the Sabbath day."

—Teachers in the public schools of France are very seldom paid more than $5 a week, and as the expense for salaries is now a little over $15,000,000, the Minister of Public Instruction refuses to add to this amount and so increase taxation.

—The University of Iowa, of which Dr. Pickard is President, graduated this year from its classical department a class of forty, fifteen of whom were ladies. Of the twenty-five gentlemen in the class, four are to study for the ministry.

—There were added to the Southern Presbyterian churches, in the year ending May last on profession of faith 6,062 persons, an advance of more than 1,200 over the previous year. There are 6,000 Elders and 4,000 Deacons in the church.—N. Y. Herald.

—Among the 146 youth who graduated at Harvard in 1876 there are now fifty-two lawyers, ten doctors, eight ministers, ten teachers, five architects, three journalists, three manufacturers, three bankers and two artists, and twenty-four are in mercantile and other general business.—D. trout Post.

—Government (State) expenditures for education in this country are mentioned as amounting at last accounts to $81,795,929. With a school population of 15,302,862, there is a school attendance of 9,729,189. Germany with her compulsory system has a better record. Out of her school population of 7,500,000, children to the number of 7,200,000 constantly attend school.

—William Booth, the General of the Salvation Army in England, receives and disburses, with absolute control, $250,000 a year. He owns or rents in his name 250 buildings used for religious meetings, directs the work of 15,000 exhorters, and publishes a paper, the War Cry, which circulates 250,000 copies a month. He is well-educated, very winning as a speaker, clear-headed, and arbitrary in management, and, according to general opinion, an honest zealot.—Chicago Tribune.

—Sister Mary Frances Clare, of the Convent at Knock, County Mayo, Ireland, has taken the most practical and useful way of helping her young countrywomen by establishing an Industrial School for Irish girls, in which they are taught cooking, sewing, and all practical home duties. It will certainly prove a blessing to the country, as the opportunities for learning these arts are so limited in their own homes. The care of cows and bees, the making of butter, and knitting will also be taught in the House of Industry.—Christian Union.

The Langtry Scandal.

A Boston special to the Cincinnati News, dated the 11th inst., says: Rumors were current about the city yesterday that the entire story of the difficulty, which has arisen since Mrs. Langtry and Mrs. Labouchere came to this country, had not been told even in the frank statement just made by Henrietta. The substance of these rumors was that when Mrs. Langtry left London one of her ardent admirers, Sir George Chetwynd, excited the indignation of his recent bride by declaring his intention to follow the Lily to America; that it was in consequence of letters written to American friends by the rash young Baronet's wife, that Mrs. Langtry and Mrs. Labouchere were not received into society upon their arrival in New York; that after she came to New York, Mrs. Langtry received assiduous attention from a number of New York gentlemen, among them being Mr. Frederick Gebhardt, who was presented to her by Oscar Wilde; that Mr. Gebhardt lavished upon Mrs. Langtry valuable presents; that Mrs. Labouchere's wrath was aroused when Mrs. Langtry consented to sup at the Brunswick with Mr. Gebhardt alone after the play, where the waiters put upon them the indignity of refusing to serve their supper in a private room, that Mr. Gebhardt in some way had heard of Sir George Chetwynd's proposed plan of visiting America, and one day at the Union Club in New York wrote a telegram to Mrs. Langtry in Boston, urging her to cable Sir George not to come out, and stating certain further intentions of his, and that it was in consequence of all these occurrences, in addition to those referred to by Mrs. Labouchere, that the separation between the two ladies took place.

Cincinnati Times-Star.

An interview with a prominent New Yorker is as follows:

"What is your opinion regarding the rupture between Mrs. Labouchere and Mrs. Langtry?"

"I think Mrs. Labouchere deserves the sympathy of every true lady in society who has any knowledge of the facts, and I can vouch for their correctness. A certain lady in this city, who is connected with the Prince's 'set' in London, received an autograph letter from the Prince recommending Mrs. Langtry to her kind notice. I know this to be true, because I have seen the original. In effect it read something like this:

"My Dear Mrs. ———:

"In presenting my friend Mrs. Langtry to you. I feel sure you will do your utmost in enabling her successfully undertake a revelation of her dramatic experience in London, for which her personal qualities so eminently fit her."

"It was signed 'A E.' and dated from Marlborough House. Mrs. Langtry, however did not receive the attention which either she or the illustrious writer anticipated, for within a few days of her arrival another missive was received from Lady Hastings, to the effect that Sir George Chetwynd had been guilty of some escapade in which Mrs. Langtry's name was associated, and begging the lady to whom it was sent not to receive her. The assertion it contained was of so specific character that Mrs. Langtry did not secure the social distinction she had hoped to obtain. In fact, Mrs. Langtry has not been received in the highest social circles of New York since her arrival in this country.

"The attentions of Gebhardt and the manner with which they were received naturally gave color to the contents of Lady Hastings' letter. Hence the peculiar position of Mrs. Labouchere, who, as Mrs. Langtry's friend, did not feel at liberty to accept invitations, in which Mrs. Langtry was not included, but was compelled to remain silent until silence ceased to be a virtue. She therefore protested against Mr. Gebhardt's persistent intolerance, and the consequence was a severance of Mrs. Labouchere and Mrs. Langtry. This I believe to be the true reason for the rupture—a reason which Mrs. Labouchere has been prevented from publicly explaining, but which is well understood and appreciated in up-town circles. So far as Mr. Charles A. Mendrum's explanation on Mrs. Langtry's behalf is concerned, it amounts to nothing I merely look upon it as an advertisement. As for Mr. Freddie Gebhardt, I don't suppose it will affect him much either way. He is a club man, and I imagine he can stand this sort of a thing about as well as anyone. He will not lose any social prestige, because he does not go into society. 'Freddie' is a good fellow in his way; but he has made himself very ridiculous in this matter, which fact is generally admitted by his friends."

WE are requested by Mr. S. N. Meyer to say to his friends who have urged him to be a candidate for councilman in the Fourth Ward, that he will be compelled to decline to make the race as his business interests will require his being absent from the city during the greater part of the year 1883.

So far as we can learn the feeling in the community is very favorable toward the enterprise of constructing a street railway here. If some practical man in whom the public has confidence, will take hold of the matter energetically the stock necessary could be raised in a few days. Will some one do it?

M. DAVIS, proprietor of the clothing house on Market street, is just now offering some astonishing bargains. He guarantees that his stock is lower in price than any other in the city. He asks you to give him a call and be satisfied that the assertion is true and assures you that money will be saved by so doing.

A MAJORITY of the Frankfort council are in favor of building a handsome new theater to replace Major Opera House, recently burned, and in order to do it without burdening the tax-payers too much, it is proposed to sell the old market house property and use the proceeds to put up the building. Maysville might take a hint from this.

DURING the week beginning next Monday, the EVENING BULLETIN will be enlarged, and there will be printed and circulated each day, one thousand copies, making six thousand that will be printed during the week. The paper will be distributed in Maysville, Chester, Aberdeen and the various towns in this county. Business men who desire to make use of the BULLETIN's columns during that time, will please hand in their favors as early as possible.

The Boundaries of Astronomy.

The star sweeps along through our system with stupendous velocity. Now there can be no doubt that if the star were permanently to retain this velocity it would in the course of time travel right across our system and after leaving our system would retreat into the depths of infinite space. Is there any power adequate to recall this star voyage to infinity? We know of none, unless it be the attraction of the stars or other bodies of our sidereal system. It, therefore, becomes a matter of calculation to determine whether the attraction of all the material bodies of our sidereal system could be adequate, even with universal gravitation, to recall a body which seems bent on leaving that system with a velocity of 200 miles per second. This interesting problem has been discussed by Professor Newcomb, whose calculations we shall here follow. In the first place we require to make some estimate of the dimensions of the sidereal system, in order to see whether it seems likely that this star can ever be recalled. The number of stars may be taken at 100,000,000, which is probably double as many as the number we can see with our best telescopes. The masses of the stars may be taken as on the average five times as great as the mass of the sun. The distribution of the stars is suggested by the constitution of the milky way. One hundred million stars are presumed to be disposed in a flat circular layer of such dimension that a ray of light would require 30,000 years to traverse one diameter. Assuming the ordinary law of gravitation, it is now easy to compute the efficiency of such an arrangement in attempting to recall a moving star.

The whole question turns on a certain critical velocity of twenty-five miles a second. If a star darts through the system we have just been considering with a velocity less than twenty-five miles a second, then, after that star had moved for a certain distance, the attractive power of the system would gradually bend the path of the star round, and force the star to return to the system. If, therefore, the velocities of the stars were under no circumstances more than twenty-five miles a second, then, supposing the system to have the character we have described, that system might be always the same. The stars might be in incessant motion, but they must always remain in the vicinity of our present system, and our whole sidereal system might be an isolated object in space, just as our solar system is an isolated object in the extent of the sidereal system. We have, however, seen that for one star at all events the velocity is no less than two hundred miles a second. If this star dash through the system, then the attractions of all the bodies in the system will unite in one grand effort to recall the wanderer. This attraction must to some extent be acknowledged, the speed of the wanderer must gradually diminish as he recedes into space; but that speed will never be lessened sufficiently to bring the star back again. As the star retreats further and further the potency of the attraction will decrease, but, owing to the velocity of the star being over twenty-five miles a second, the attraction can never overcome the velocity; so that the star seems destined to escape. This calculation is, of course, founded on our assumption as to the total mass of the stars and other bodies which form our sidereal system. That estimate is founded on a liberal, indeed, a very liberal, interpretation of the evidence which our telescopes have afforded. But it may still fall short of the truth. There may be more than a hundred million stars in our system; their average weight may be more than our sun. But unless the assumption is enormously short of the truth, our inference can not be challenged. — Prof. Ball, in the Contemporary Review.
